CAMBRIDGE BANDIT HOLDS UP ANOTHER GIRL

PRESIDENT SEIZED BY HIS NEW M. R. PLAN THIEF

By International News Service.
Washington, Aug. 22.—Congress will be held in session to handle emergencies growing out of the critical railroad situation, it was announced today.

Senator Kern, the majority leader of the Senate, declared it would be impossible for Congress to adjourn Friday, the time tentatively fixed by administration leaders some days ago.

Senator Kern said: "The parliamentary situation here is such that it will be impossible for Congress to finish its business on Friday. I cannot say how much longer it will take."

"The whole situation now hinges on the outcome of this afternoon's conference at the White House between the President and the railroad men. Any legislative program relating to the strike situation or any decision regarding a joint session of Congress to hear the President, cannot be made until after that conference."

President Wilson will confer regarding a legislation program to deal with the impending railroad strike and to prevent further controversies of this character late this afternoon with the steering committee of the Senate. It was stated that the question of what recommendations he might make would be a subject of deal on the outcome of his conference with the railroad men, which was scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

President Wilson practically has put the whole side of the railway controversy in the hands of the Secretary of War, Franklin K. Lane, as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Lane was familiarizing himself with railroad affairs. He now is bringing his experience to bear on the various proposals of settlement and is adding the President in his self-appointed task of preventing industrial wars.

NEW PROPOSAL.
While the President withholds details, it was learned officially that what he now wants is that both sides agree to suspend all questions in dispute to the new legislative committee, the railroad men, however, first accepting the basic principle of the eight-hour day, at least in an amended form.

Then the President intends asking

SEIZED BY WAS KIDNAPED THIEF

Miss Kate Lyons of No. 392 Harvard street reported to the Cambridge police today that a masked bandit attacked her on Ware street last night.

Ware street is a quiet, shady thoroughfare. Miss Lyons was walking along the street when the masked man stepped from behind a tree, fairly in front of her.

He did not draw a gun, but gripped her by the throat.

"Come across," he commanded. Miss Lyons with a convulsive twist freed herself—and screamed. The man fled.

"I'm sure he was a white man," she told the police today in describing him. "And he has a great big dimple in his chin."

The Cambridge police believe this is the same man who has committed other recent holdups in Cambridge.

Kristen Chatterton of Douglas street met the holdup man late last night in front of his home. The man jumped from behind a tree as Chatterton was fitting his latchkey to the lock, and yelled:

"Throw up your hands."

Chatterton threw open the door and threw herself inside the house instead of throwing up her hands, and so escaped.

The bandit had been discovered Saturday morning at dawn in the parlor of the home of Arthur J. Todd at No. 14 Granville road, Cambridge. He was discovered by Miss Mary Pedraza, he knocked her unconscious and escaped.

The night before he held up Clarence E. Bonerville and his two sisters and got $12.

ALLIES LOSE 40,000 ON SOMME IN WEEK

New York, Aug. 28.—Forty thousand Anglo-French soldiers were lost in one week's fighting on the Somme, it was said today by British foreign assistant secretary-general of the United Kingdom, who arrived in New York from England on the liner New York.

Mr. Beck said the losses on both sides have been enormous.

PITTSBURGH. (First Game.)
Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 28.—It was only by the use of Fred Clarke's patent cover that the Braves and Pirates were able to hook up a double-header this afternoon, for it rained heavy all night, sufficient to put an ordinary dimmed out of commission.

But the big tarpaulin had the field in good condition when the athletes started the first game.

Dick Rudolph, with a record of ten straight victories to his credit, came here on Saturday morning with the Braves, to get tested up by Arthur Nohr, to get tested up by Arthur Nohr, to get tested up by Arthur Nohr.

TELL AGAIN HOW SKEFFINGTON DIED

By International News Service.
Burlington, Aug. 28.—Details of the shooting of P. Henry Skeffington were given today at the government investigation of the execution of Skeffington, Fred MacIntyre and Thomas Dickson at the time of the Boston uprising.

Barber MacIntyre of the firing squad testified that Captain Coulter gave the order to fire.

Skeffington was the first to fall, the three men dropped and the members of the firing squad went into the guard room. The order then was given to fire again, and the three men were shot.

Tewksbury Sues Hetty Green Heirs for Pauper's Care

A strange aftermath of the life of Hetty Green developed in East Cambridge today when the town of Tewksbury filed in the East Cambridge Court a bill of equity against the heirs of Hetty Green, claiming that they had failed to support her in her old age.

Green, who died years ago at New Bedford, she left a two-million-dollar estate, with the proviso that the interest was to go to Hetty Green during her life.

Green, a direct descendant of Sylvia Howard, is an inhabitant of the town of Tewksbury, Mass.

He was an inmate of the New Bedford Hospital for the Insane, from August 15, 1914, to April 15, 1917, and from August 1, 1918, to the present.

Tewksbury claims he owes them for his board and support $1,225, and asks that the court establish this claim, and by injunction restrain the heirs from paying him his share of the estate and restrain him from disposing of his share.

URGES FORCE TO END BOYCOTTS AGAINST U. S.

By International News Service.
Washington, Aug. 28.—Senator Thomas of Colorado today introduced an amendment to the emergency revenue bill authorizing the President to "employ such part of the land or naval force, or the President to withhold clearance for delivery to a foreign port."

The amendment would empower the President to offer the detention of any vessel discriminating against American ships or refusing to accept cargo for delivery to a foreign port.

Authority also would be conferred on the President to withhold clearance for the vessels of any belligerent nation or of any nation discriminating against American commerce until they shall restore to American vessels and ships reciprocal liberty of commerce and equal facilities to American vessels and ships.

Senator Thomas' proposal is an amplification of his amendment tacked to the shipping bill by the House on July 27, 1915, and reported by the Treasury to withhold clearance for vessels refusing to accept cargo for delivery to a foreign port.

The proposed amendment is expected to provoke considerable opposition on account of the British representation against the shipping bill.

Put Kingdom of God in City Hall, Says Dr. Gladden

"Put the Kingdom of God in your City Hall," urged Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden of Columbus, O., in his address today before a union meeting of the churches of Columbus, O.

Dr. Gladden deplored the fact that the working people were alienated from the church and that church membership was not keeping pace with the population.

"The army of organized labor is either outside the church or has no friendly relation to the churches," continued Dr. Gladden.

"What is the remedy? The Boston churches, like the churches elsewhere, must get away from their individualistic tendencies of catering to the rich and look after the general welfare of the mass. This is the Christianity of Christ, the other is Christianity of the individual."

By International News Service.
London, Aug. 28.—The sinking of the British steamer Leinster, is reported by Lloyd's. The crew was saved.

Maritime records list a Greek steamer named the Leinster, 1,450 tons, but do not mention a British steamer of that name.

BALKAN NATION JOINS THE ALLIES

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Hostilities have broken out between Rumania and Austria-Hungary. Rumanian troops have invaded Transylvania, Hungary. The German War Office in its official report today stated that Austro-Hungarian troops in the army group of Archduke Karl had captured Rumanian soldiers in fighting at Siedenburgen, on the Transylvanian frontier.

London, Aug. 28.—Rumania has declared war against Austria-Hungary and thrown her army of 500,000 men to the side of the entente allies.

A Berlin dispatch says Rumania's declaration of hostility was made Sunday night, and that the Federal council of the empire has been summoned.

The Rumanian government issues a note today setting forth the reasons why war was declared. The cause are enumerated as follows:

- 1.—The Rumanian population is exposed to the risks of war and invasion by the Austro-Hungarians.
- 2.—Intervention of Rumania will shorten the war.
- 3.—Rumania decided to cast her lot with the allies because they alone can guarantee her national unity.

GERMANS DEFEAT IN WAR; SERBIANS MAKE NEW GAINS

German Envoy Weeps Leading With Rumania

Rome, Aug. 28.

AM simply King of Rumania and must follow the national will."

This was the reply made by King Ferdinand of Rumania when the German minister to his court pleaded with him not to join the central allies, according to a Bucharest dispatch to the Massachussetts.

The message states that only three members of the Rumanian Crown Council voted against war, and that following the ballot they pledged their support to the government.

Weeping, the German envoy is said to have implored King Ferdinand to maintain Rumania's neutrality, declaring that Hohenzollern should not make war upon Hohenzollern.

The members of the Council were surrounded by crowds as they left the meeting, and demonstrations of enthusiasm were immediately organized throughout the city.

Simultaneously to Rumania and their allies, for the Teutons are probably not in a position to take the offensive in the near future, but even that can be avoided.

Assuming that the Rumanians will take the offensive, two campaigns are open.

The first, and the one probably most popular with the Rumanians, is to invade Hungary over the Transylvanian border.

The second is to invade Bulgaria, which is only a little over 100 miles from the Rumanian frontier.

South of Varna the Balkan mountains divide into small basins, which they approach the sea. Furthermore, a line of railroad runs along the coast, where the advancing army could be helped by the Russian fleet.

From the Rumanian frontier to the Sea of Marmara is only a little over 100 miles in a straight line.

From the Rumanian frontier to Constantinople is about two hundred and fifty miles along the coast.

With Russia backing the Rumanian drive, and with Rumania holding possession of Constantinople, and with the allies, it appears probable that the Rumanians will launch their legions southward.

A further consideration may be the long enmity between Rumania and Bulgaria.

Rumania wants Transylvania, but Bulgaria wants the Balkans, and the two nations are in a bitter struggle.

This fact lends strength to the drive to the south, toward Bulgaria, and toward Turkey.

To summarize the military effects of Rumania's entrance:

1.—Her entry increases by one million the number of troops at the front of the Teutons against the allies.

2.—Her entry means Hungary, for the Rumanians are now in a position to strike at the heart of Hungary.

3.—Her entry means Bulgaria, for the Rumanians are now in a position to strike at the heart of Bulgaria.

4.—Her entry means Turkey, for the Rumanians are now in a position to strike at the heart of Turkey.

5.—Expressed roughly, the entry of Rumania increases the number of troops at the front of the Teutons against the allies by one million.

the difficulty of the Teutonic line about unshakable.

But the military considerations are not alone in their importance. Diplomatically, the entry of Rumania may be expected to have one prompt result.

That is, it may be expected to bring Greece into the war.

The entry of Greece would result in the disappearance of friction at Salonica, as well as adding a small but second army to the forces of the allies.

Furthermore, the entry of Rumania, by swelling the balance of power to strongly against the Teutons, may well enter any Russian campaign, which might have been considered entering the war on the Teutons' side.

There is a further significance in Rumania's entry. Since the beginning of the war there has been a steady drain of Rumanian soldiers to the front.

Rumania has sold to the allies a large quantity of grain, oil, and minerals, and has been found to be a most efficient ally.

On this trade, the Rumanians have saved their country from the worst of the war.

With the disappearance of the source of supplies, Germany's food supply is threatened.

How much can only be told by time.

It is not surprising if those who are in the cause of the allies shall welcome the entry of Rumania with great satisfaction.

1.—Between Germany and Turkey will be destroyed.

2.—That Turkey and Bulgaria will be smashed as Serbia.

3.—That Austria may be forced to a separate peace.

Against these predictions must be set the opposing forces.

And the further consideration must be set that, assuming Austria makes peace, Germany will be no worse off than she is today.

She will have lost her frontiers to defend, she will be free of the necessity of supporting Serbia.

And her ally, Austria, will be able to devote all her resources to her own campaign, instead of watching them from the Balkans to the Adriatic.

Only one thing is sure; that the entry of Rumania the central allies have suffered since the battle of the Marne, and that the next two months will undoubtedly see new and brilliant fighting resumed on a tremendous scale.

WAR SUMMARY

Italy has declared war against Germany, and Rumania has taken similar action against Austria-Hungary.

Neither move comes as a surprise. Italy's declaration was forced upon her by the demand of her allies that she co-operate in the Balkan campaign, where her troops must fight German troops. Rumania's action had been predicted even by German observers since the Russian advance to the Carpathians along the Rumanian border.

Of the two declarations, that by Rumania is far more important. Italy's formal action against Germany simply confirms a situation that has existed ever since Italy entered the war against Austria. Italy will now seize more German property within her territory, while Germany will intern some thousands of Italians and seize Italian property.

Italy will throw troops into the Balkans to aid the allies there, and will face the menace of a German drive through the Trentino, of the sort which Austria attempted some weeks ago. The military effect of the whole move will be considerable.

But the entrance of Rumania is another matter. Rumania forms a tremendous salient thrusting in between Bulgaria and Hungary, through which Russia can pour troops. It gives the Teutons an extensive new frontier to guard. The main battle fronts have been roughly as follows: Russia, 600 miles; France, 400 miles; Balkans (Salonica), 250 miles; Italy, 250 miles. Total, about 1,500 miles. Rumania's frontier is almost 700 miles long, and across any part of it the Teutonic allies can strike a serious blow.

The entry of Rumania gives the Teutons one-half as much more frontier to guard than she had before. If they had three men to a mile before, they now have but two. Rumania's entrance strikes them a proportionately heavy blow.

In Picardy, the only result of heavy assaults by both sides appears to have been a gain of a short trench by the British. The Germans made a fruitless effort at Fleury, northeast of Verdun.

The Austrian bombardment in the Trentino has increased in force again, but the infantry attack expected for some days has not developed.

The Bulgars in the Balkans have driven southward to the sea at Kavala, where they came under the fire of British warships. The campaign here may be expected to develop bitterly when Rumania strikes Bulgaria in the rear.

He took me driving often and always talked about them and told me he loved me and wanted me to marry him and be his children's mother. He knows every word of this is the truth.

As far as blackmailing is concerned, it's absurd. Why, I have been his guest at some of the most fashionable and exclusive clubs in this country.

The reason I withdrew the New York suit is that Mr. Hill is an Eastern man and the friend of many millionaires there. I ex-

Pittsburgh, Aug. 28.—The fast-traveling Boston Braves, after falling off their winning streak of six straight games by dropping the Sabbath day contest to the Cubs, in Chicago, 5-1, arrived in Pittsburgh this morning. The long series opens with a twin bill today.

Stallings said there was nothing new in the case of the temperamental slinger, so far as his acquisition by the Boston club was concerned, to hear him tell it he is now sorry he made such an extravagant bid as Players Smith, Fitzpatrick, Barnes and Collins in exchange for Hon. Heinie

...who was later Zimmerman when his outfit was apparently on the rocks, is now willing to let well enough alone; stand pat on the combination he has winning.

B. & M. BANKRUPTCY CASE HEARD IN COURT TOMORROW

A hearing on the petition for a receivership for the Boston & Maine Railroad will be held tomorrow before Judge William L. Putnam in the United States District Court. Judge Putnam is at the summer home at Kittery, Me., but he has issued an order of notice which is returnable tomorrow. Judge Putnam will arrive in Boston early tomorrow morning and will then take up the financial difficulties of the Boston & Maine Railroad. A bitter legal battle is expected at the hearing. Counsel for some of the stockholders will protest the petition. They declare that there is collusion between the Boston & Maine and the holders of the road's notes who have asked that a receiver be appointed.

Counsel for the Connecticut River and Concord and Montreal Companies, the leased line which by their refusal to enter into a reorganization on some basis that would give the Boston & Maine more freedom precipitated the case as expected to be represented. It is possible that Charles P. Choate, Jr., counsel for both companies, will be an appearance today.

The hearing is expected to embrace all pending proceedings in the case to date, the petition of the Intervenor, the Intervenor's request for a receivership, and they point to its grant by the stockholders' Association and such other troubles as may develop. The military stockholders declare that the condition of the company at present is not such as to justify a receivership, and they point to the great improved financial situation since the administration of President Huston began.

Charles S. Mellen, former president of the company and now president of the Intervenor, declares the receivership unnecessary, and an advancing interest payments of the road's $10,000,000 bonds from the $10,000,000 in its treasury, and an increase on the stockholders' assets.

Amusements Amusements
CUSTOM has caused the screen production limiting itself merely to story or plot to be termed a "photoplay." The lines marking the photoplay from the spectacle are sometimes lightly defined. But when a producer, with an utter disregard for expense, films scenes of his story in spectacular form, scenes of a breadth and largeness that inspire awe, his production may be called a "spectacle." The broadness of the term in the film field has constantly been growing larger. When David Griffith presented his "Birth of a Nation" it was felt that the topmost goal had been reached. But now there comes Thomas Ince with his "CIVILIZATION," acclaimed by every critic who has seen it to be the most superb film spectacle ever produced.

"Every past performance of the motion picture makers is outdone by an incredibly wide margin, in Ince's spectacle 'Civilization'."—New York World.

In This Editorial, The American Speaks for the American People to the American Congress

SENATORS and Representatives, by a great and decisive majority vote, you have just shown to the other nations of the world that the Congress of the United States can rise above considerations of party and splendidly perform the patriotic duty of safeguarding the Republic.

For your wise and foreseeing public service in providing an increase of naval strength that makes our land secure from invasion and pillage, your countrymen applaud you and thank you.

You have indeed well served the Republic and deserve your people's applause and gratitude.

But, gentlemen, now that you have made sure the necessary preparedness of your own country for war, there is still another great duty to humanity which you can perform and which you should perform before you order the adjournment of the Congress.

That duty, gentlemen, is to instruct the President of the United States to make a formal tender of the good offices and friendly mediation of the American people, through their servants, in a manly, sympathetic, humane and Christian endeavor to bring about negotiations for peace between the warring nations of Europe.

There is one thing sure, gentlemen of the Congress, and that is that no power on earth can forbid you to make the effort to bring about peace; and it is equally sure that whether their good offices and tendered mediation are accepted or not, your countrymen, at least, will, to a man, endorse and applaud and sustain your action if you make the proffer of mediation in their name.

And if you have the approval of your own consciences and the favor and applause of your own countrymen, what else matters to you, gentlemen of the Congress?

For most assuredly the highest and most solemn obligation of each of you is to obey the voice of his conscience, and the next highest and most solemn obligation is to obey the will of the people whose representatives you are; and he among you who faithfully fulfills those two obligations serves well his country and mankind and can wait with composure his day in the court of public opinion and his turn before the judgment seat of the future.

Gentlemen of the Congress, this frightful war in Europe has descended from one plane of slaughter and destruction to deeper abysses of madness and savagery until its horrors are unbearable to us and to the other peoples who are onlookers.

You must, all of you, have read within these few days past the narratives in which the correspondents of American newspapers have endeavored to convey to the American people some conception of the hideous and awful scenes of murder which are being enacted by day and by night on the battlefields in France.

The confession common to all these men, picked for their trained powers of observation and description, is that not one of them can find words in our language to convey even a far-off conception of those awful scenes—of those acres and miles of ground upon which hundreds of thousands of men have been mangled and mutilated with every conceivable implement of death until the very soil is so mixed with shuddered flesh of slain men that the living can scarcely maintain their lines of earth-burrows against the sickening stench of these vast charnel pits and these heaps upon heaps of carrion that only a few weeks ago were strong men in the vigor of youth and health.

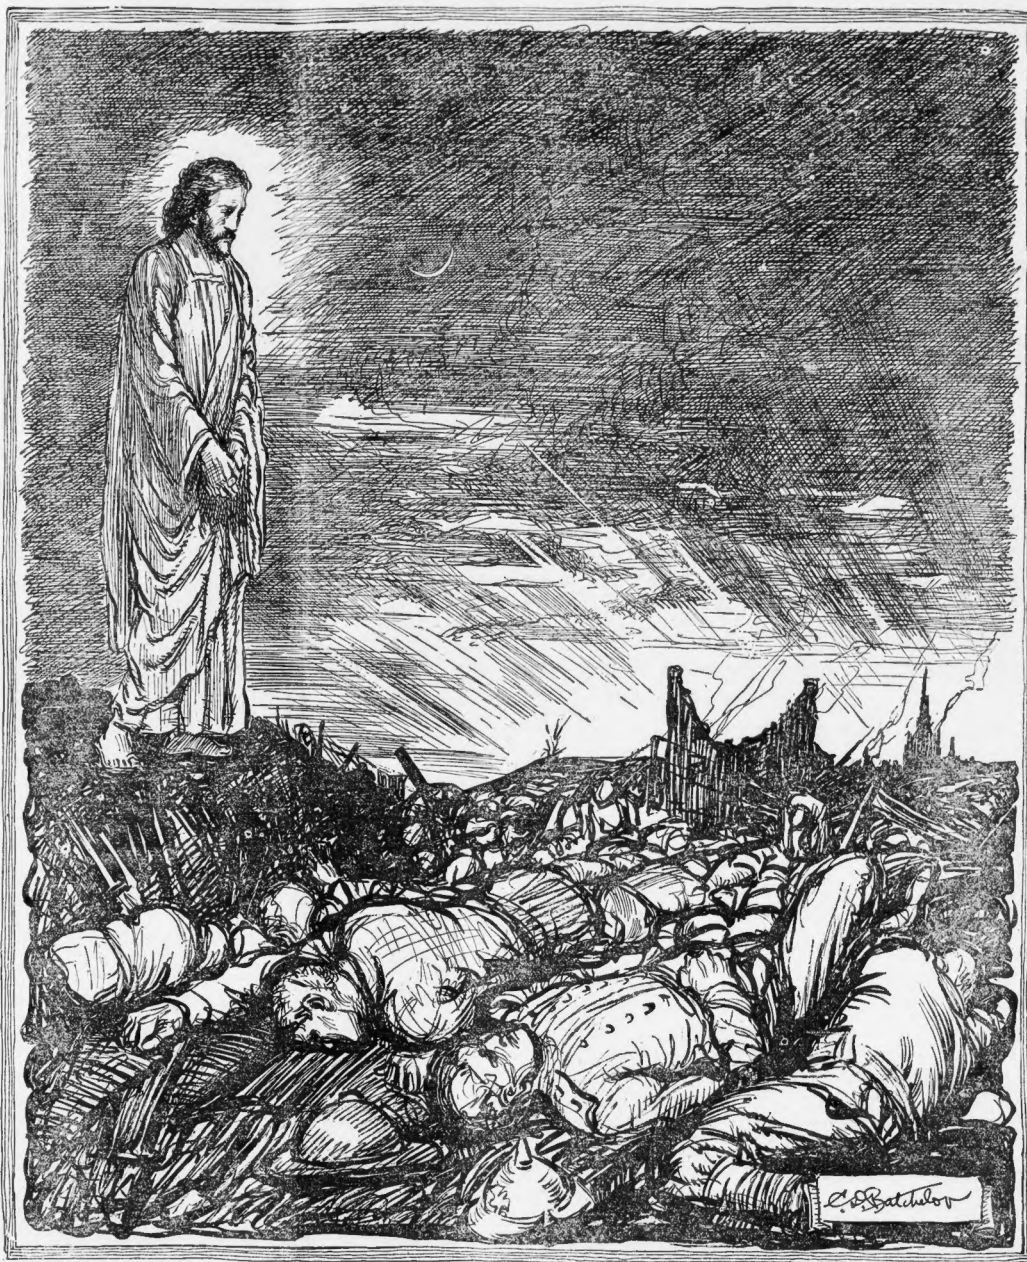

Daily we all read of such horrors as it never before entered into the mind of man to conceive; of whole companies and regiments of men overwhelmed and obliterated by an infernal rain of explosives and poisonous gases; of hundreds of men stumbling out of these hells of death and mutilation, some shrieking in their sudden insanity, some screaming in their awful agonies, some with their eyes blown from their sockets and their ears burst by the withering fire and frightful detonations of shells loaded with burning acids and destroying chemicals; some mutilated out of all likeness to human beings by the flying hail of shattered steel.

We read that within the brief space of the eight weeks just past more than eight hundred thousand men have died in the tremendous battles waging on all the fronts upon which the Teutons are meeting the onsets of the Allies—a host of torn and mutilated corpses that, laid side by side, would pave with dead faces a horrid road three hundred miles in length—a fit highway indeed for the feet of the makers of war and the conquerors in that dreadful game of death!

Senators and Representatives, the voice of Humanity cries to you by day and by night from these abysses of agony and of woe, beseeching you to perform your duty to God and man in a manly and courageous endeavor to end these scenes of dreadful wholesale murder.

And, Senators and Representatives, if you and if all the rest of us who are your countrymen had neither any of those feelings of compassion which become good men, nor any ears for the agonized cries of Europe's tortured peoples, nor any of that tender sympathy for the helpless and suffering which is the hallmark of a brave and valiant man, nor any natural prompting to dare and to do for humanity's sake, still the mere cold, calculating counsel of self-interest should move us to interfere with all our influence and all our means of persuasion and compulsion to bring peace to Europe.

For, Senators and Representatives, not even the setting of this evening's sun is more sure than is the certainty that the continuance of this slaughter of the white race and this frightful waste of the white race's wealth and resources will leave us to hear, practically alone, the threatening and tremendous assault of the Asiatic and the Slav upon the religion, the institutions and the civilization of us Caucasians.

The most effective blow which we can strike at the peril that threatens us and our children is the effective use of all our influence and all our power to end the mutual slaughter and destruction of Europe's people and Europe's wealth.

To such a noble purpose and such a far-reaching result, gentlemen of the Congress, the representatives of a free, wise and brave people ought to address all their energies and all their efforts.

Senators and Representatives, whether we believe it or not, there is a Power which inclines out to nations the just rewards of righteousness and courage and the just rewards of selfishness and cowardice.

And if we, as a people, and you, as our representatives and, indeed, our only voice and means of expression, do shirk this solemn duty to mankind and do refuse even to try to end this misery and bloodshed, how shall we escape our own punishment, when we shall be guilty of so much innocent blood and of so much incalculable woe and wretchedness?

Let each man of you take that question into the secret chamber of his own conscience and before that judgment bar make answer to his own soul, upon his faith and his honor, as becomes a true man, a brave man, an honest man and an American.

Gentlemen of the Congress of the United States, for humanity's sake, speak the sympathy and the compassion of the American people to the governments and the peoples of agonized Europe.

Tender to them the mediation of America.

Suppose our good offices are rejected?

That would be Europe's loss and dishonor—not ours.

For no man and no nation is shamed or dishonored by a noble deed or a noble purpose, no matter if both purpose and deed do fail of their object.

Gentlemen, there is not one in ten thousand of your countrymen who will not applaud you with all his heart and soul if you will manfully and courageously and sympathetically tender to Europe's warring governments the good offices and the mediation of the kindly, powerful, mighty people whose representatives you are and whose spokesman you undoubtedly carry of right to be when ever the Republic has a message to be spoken to mankind.
